

JAMES COYLE, HEIR OF PATRICK COYLE.

MARCH 5, 1840.

Laid on the table.

Mr. RANDOLPH, from the Committee on Revolutionary Claims, made the following

REPORT:

The Committee on Revolutionary Claims, to whom was referred the petition of James Coyle, heir of Patrick Coyle, deceased, report:

That petitioner, in consequence of "his reduced and indigent condition," prays Congress to bestow on him some compensation for the Revolutionary services of his father, performed in 1776, and for "horses, &c." "during the time of the service, furnished for the use of the army." The proof is altogether unsatisfactory and insufficient to support the claim; and the entire claim itself not coming within the principles heretofore adopted for the reward of Revolutionary services, cannot be allowed. The committee, therefore, report against the prayer of the petition.

Blair & Rives, printers.

JAMES COYLE, HEIR OF PATRICK COYLE

MARCH 5, 1860.
Laid on the table.

Mr. Randolph, from the Committee on Revolutionary Claims, made the following

REPORT:

The Committee on Revolutionary Claims, to whom was referred the petition of James Coyle, heir of Patrick Coyle, deceased, report:

"That petitioner, in consequence of 'his reduced and indigent condition,' prays Congress to bestow on him some compensation for the Revolutionary services of his father, performed in 1776, and for 'horses, &c.' 'during the time of the service, furnished for the use of the army.' The proof is altogether unsatisfactory and insufficient to support the claim; and the entire claim itself not coming within the principles heretofore adopted for the reward of Revolutionary services, cannot be allowed. The committee, therefore, report against the prayer of the petition.

Blair & River printers.